Harrison in Boston.

How the President Was Received at the Hub.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME.

The Officers of the State and City Privately Receive the President at the Hotel Vendome—A Public Reception in Faneuil Hall, Thousands Being Unable to Gain Admission.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—President Benjamin Harrison and party arrived in this city at 9:06 a. m. As early as 8 o'clock crowds began to gather about the station and when the train arrived the depot and adjacent streets were packed with humanity. At 8:30 Lieutenant Governor Brackett and staff, with Mayor Hart, arrived at the station and made their way to the platform, accompanied by Lieut. Col. Mansfield, United States engineer corps, who is detailed as a special aid to the president.

Immediately upon the arrival of the train Lieutenant Governor Brackett boarded the special car and cordially greeted the president. The party then left the train and moved along the platform, kept free from the crowd by a cordon of police to the entrance at Kneeland street where carriages were in waiting to convey the guests to the Hotel Vendome. When the president appeared at the entrance cheer after cheer went up from the crowd. The enthusiasm was continued along the entire route from the depot to the hotel, the president bowing his acknowledgements.

The party were escorted in five carriages by the first battalion of cavalry companies. A National lancers and d'Roxbury horse guards with the battalion bugle corps of sixteen men and a police detail. The first carriage contained the President, Lieutenant Governor Brackett and Gen. Dalton. Next in order were Mayor Hart, Secretary Windom and Col. Mansfield; then Secretary Proctor, Surgeon General Holt and Gen. Shepard; in the fourth were Col. Rotch, Col. Hoar, Secretary Halford and Col. Newman; and in the fifth Col. Currier, Col. Wallace, Col. Abbott and Col. Weil. Many of the buildings and stores along the route were gay with flags, bunting and appropriate mottoes and the sidewalks, windows and streets were thronged with people anxious to get a view of the president.

As the head of the procession turned into Tremont street a detachment of Battery A began firing a salute, continuing until the president arrived at the Vendome. As the carriage containing the distinguished party dashed up to the Vendome the occupants were cheered. The president jumped nimbly from the carriage and stepped rapidly up the hotel steps, followed by Secretaries Windom, Proctor and Private Secretary Halford. The detail of cadets in the hallway "turned out the guard" in honor of the president and National secretaries.

The president and those immediately accompanying him were then escorted to the reception room, and thence to the elegant suites reserved for them. At 10:30 a. m. the president with his party ranged themselves round the tables in the marble breakfast room, whose whole aspect suggested skillful catering to the esthetic taste as well as to the palate.

After a brief rest in his private apartments following breakfast the president entered the ebony room, and there received the officers of the state and city, Federal officers, officers of the United States army and navy, mayors of cities and others to whom invitations had been sent. The reception lasted from 11:30 until 12:10 p. m., during which time about 500 persons paid their respects to the president.

At the close of the reception President Harrison again retired to his private apartments, where he rested quietly until 12:45 p. m., when the party entered carriages, and escorted by the cavalry started for Faneuil hall, where the popular reception took place. Faneuil hall square was filled with people long before the distinguished visitors made their appearance, and the moment the doors of the hall were opened the crowd surged forward and forced its way past the detail of police stationed at the entrance, who were unable to prevent themselves being carried along by the pressure. The hall was quickly packed, and the doors were then closed, shutting out thousands, who were not slow in manifesting their disappointment.

As the president appeared in sight shout after shout went up, continuing until the carriage had traversed the square and the presidential party had alighted and passed through the Adams street entrance. The president was immediately escorted to the platform, where were already seated a number of city officials and prominent citizens.

After a brief introductory speech by Mayor Hart, the handshaking commenced and continued for an hour. During the reception music was rendered by a band stationed in the gallery.

When the public reception had ended the gentlemen on the platform were individually introduced to the president, who was then escorted back to the Hotel Vendome. The party was enthusiastically greeted along the streets. After a short rest at the hotel the president proceeded to the Blue dining room, where Mayor Hart had invited him to partake of luncheon, to which various representatives of the city had been invited. The luncheon was an entirely informal affair, the guests numbering but twenty-one.

At its close the president returned to his private apartments and prepared for a suburban drive tendered by the city government. This embraced a tour of the most beautiful parts of Boston's environs, the start being made from the Vendome at 5:25 p. m.

The president returned from the drive about 8 o'clock, having been driven as far as Brookline, where refreshments were served at the residence of Hon. John A. Chandler.

During the evening a concert, complimentary to the president, was given by a band of one hundred pieces on the wall of the commons, and it is estimated that 25,000 people gathered in the neighborhood. The presidential party retired at about 10:50, and left for Bar Harbor at 9 o'clock this morning.

From 5:30 to 6 p. m. Private Secretary Halford held a reception at the Boston Press club room, which he was present [illegible] newspaper men [illegible] at the club [illegible].

FOREIGN DISPATCHES.

Mrs. Maybrick Found Guilty of Murder and Sentenced to Death—Other News.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 8.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Maybrick, who has been on trial for the murder of her husband, brought in a verdict of guilty. Mrs. Maybrick was thereupon sentenced to death.

The announcement of the verdict of guilty in the Maybrick case, causes great excitement among all classes of people here, who have been watching the trial with intense interest. After the verdict became known thousand of people assembled around the entrance to the court room and waited for the departure of the judge. As soon as he made his appearance, he was greeted with howls of rage, and the hooting of the crowd was kept up for a long time. There were incessant cries of shame, and an attack upon the judge's carriage was only prevented by the active interference of the police. The feeling in Liverpool against the verdict is intense. Steps have been taken to secure a stay of execution, on the ground of the discovery of further medical evidence.

Inspecting the British Fleet.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Emperor William, of Germany, and his brother, Prince Henry, in company of the Prince of Wales, inspected the royal yacht squadron yesterday, and afterwards dined together on board the royal yacht. The Prince of Wales warmly toasted the emperor and expressed his confidence that the great German army and the British fleet would together succeed in preserving the peace of the world.

The emperor, responding, spoke in high praise of the British fleet, which, he said, was the finest in the world. Germany, he continued, had an army fully equal to her wants, and if the British fleet fully met the demands of the great British empire, Europe could regard those two as most important factors in the preservation of peace.

Prince Henry also spoke in warm praise of the British fleet.

Habeas Corpus Refused.

DUBLIN, Aug. 8. The court has refused the application for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Mr. Charles Conybeare, member of parliament, who was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for conspiring to oppose the law.

Arrested for Being a German Spy.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Capt. Rajac, formerly a member of the staff of Gen. Boulanger and subsequently attached to the foreign office, has been arrested on the charge of being a German spy.

LOCKED UP FOR FORGERY.

A President of a Street Car Company a Defaulter for $130,000.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Eben S. Allen, president of the Green Line Street Car company, was arrested yesterday for forging certificates of stock, for about 700 shares. He was locked up in police headquarters. He has been president of the company for a long time and connected with the company for twenty-five years.

The amount of Allen's defalcation is stated to be $125,000 or $130,000. The prisoner has made a confession in which he says that four years ago he became financially interested in a patent fire escape. He lost all the money he put in, and in the embarrassment thus caused yielded to the temptation to raise money by false issues of stock. He forged the signatures of the company's treasurer and secretary, and sold about 100 shares of this bogus stock. Many of the shares are now in the hands of innocent holders. The false issue went on for four years without detection.

Yesterday, in President Allen's absence, a broker called at the office to have some stock transferred for a purchaser. The treasurer, in making the necessary comparison with the books, saw that the share numbers were duplicates. A meeting of the directors was at once summoned, and President Allen's guilt being apparent, it was decided to cause his arrest. Upon being locked up at police headquarters, Mr. Allen broke down and made a full statement to the foregoing effect.

The directors have decided to prosecute him to the full extent of the law. Allen has lived in a somewhat luxurious style for several months, having an elegant residence at Pawlings. He recently returned from a pleasure trip in Europe. He is about 50 years old, and has a wife and children. He has always had a good reputation in business circles.

Later From the Kentucky Election.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 9. The returns from the state election show that the Democrats have an increased plurality of 18,000 over the election of two years ago, and that Monday's majority will reach 35,000. The last legislature stood 102 Democrats and 36 Republicans opposition. That elected Monday will consist of 114 Democrats and 34 Republicans.

Subscribing to the World's Fair.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Mayor Grant has received the first subscription to the projected exhibition of 1892, in the shape of the New York Sun's check for $10,000.

OHIO STATE TELEGRAMS.

VARIOUS HAPPENINGS IN DIFFERENT PARTS OF THE STATE.

The Sheriff of Paulding County Short in His Accounts and Asked to Resign by His Bondsmen—Other Dispatches from Various Towns in Different Parts of the State.

PAULDING, O., Aug. 8.—Considerable excitement was created in political circles here yesterday by the announcement that E. C. Swain, the sheriff of this county, was short in his accounts, and to such an extent that his bondsmen had made up their minds to ask to be released from their obligations. Mr. Swain was cognizant of the fact, and after considerable palavering, was persuaded to resign, which he did yesterday afternoon.

It is stated by good and responsible authority that Swain is short in his accounts to the amount of $2,200, and probably more, and the business of the office is away behind and generally mixed.

E. C. Swain was elected to the sheriff's office two years ago, and made a very good officer until about a year ago, when he became negligent.

After a Long Separation.

NORWICH, O., Aug. 8. Will Clary, of Wellington, Lorain county, came to Fairfield, Huron county, and took his sister, Miss Clara Clary, home with him on Tuesday last. This brother and sister had not known each other's whereabouts since the death of their mother, which occurred ten or twelve years ago in a distant state, at which time the family became separated. Last Sunday Mr. Clary accidentally heard that his sister was in Fairfield, and on Tuesday came to offer her a home. It was a happy meeting.

Troubles Caused by an Elopement.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 8.—Mrs. George Stephan, the woman who eloped several days ago with J. A. Gehres, the building contractor, has written her husband from Windsor, Ont., saying she is happy and they are going to Montreal. Mrs. Gehres is in terrible distress. She is sick and has four children to care for. Stephan does not seem to care whether his wife returns or not. He says his children are old enough to get along with out their mother, and he would never live with her again anyway.

Twenty Million Feet of Gas Daily.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 8. When this city bonded herself for $750,000 to provide natural gas that would knock out the monopoly, the Standard Oil company declared that it would be impossible to buy any gas territory. The city got some land, however, at Van Buren, and drilled a well. Yesterday a gusher was struck which will yield about 20,000,000 feet of gas per day.

Ex-Auditor Graham Seen in Toronto.

LEBANON, O., Aug. 8. From a source that is perfectly reliable, it is learned that ex-Auditor Graham was seen last Sunday in Toronto, Canada. Walter Whitacre, son of Representative W. T. Whitacre, of Missouri, was on the excursion to Toronto, and is positive that he saw him riding through the streets Sunday afternoon in a carriage.

Canal Lands Appraised.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 8.—The state canal commission have made appraisements of lands belonging to the state amounting to $278,197. The title to some of the land is in dispute, and will necessarily have to be settled in the courts. If the attorneys' fees are not too steep the state ought to realize handsomely from these lands.

A Cyclist Sets Himself a Huge Task.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—At 7 o'clock yesterday morning F. W. Vansicklen, a prominent bicyclist of Chicago, left this city on his wheel for Kansas City, which he expects to reach by Friday night. To do that he will have to ride 123 miles each day. Mr. Vansicklen hopes to do this by steady hard work. This gentleman is the same one who rode from New York to Albany last June, making the 168 miles in seventeen hours and ten minutes, which still stands as the record. He is a well built fellow, with a wonderful constitution.

Seals Worth Fighting For.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The Post Express publishes an interview with Henry A. Glidden, ex-secretary of the Republican state committee, who was treasury agent at the Seal islands in Behring sea for three years under Secretary Folger. Mr. Glidden says the islands are worth fighting for, and that unless protected the seals will soon be exterminated. The seals and blue foxes are the only valuable product of the islands.

Twelve Freight Cars Wrecked.

COLUMBIA CITY, Ind., Aug. 8. -At noon yesterday on the Nickel-Plate railroad, near South Whitley, just south of here, a west bound freight train separated, and the detached parts came together again, causing a terrible collision. Six cars loaded with merchandise and six empty cars were entirely destroyed. Two tramps named John Randall and Thomas Fayle, both from Syracuse, N. Y., were caught in the wreck and instantly killed.

NAPTHA EXPLOSION.

Boiler of a Yacht Lets Go, Killing Four and Injuring Several Seriously.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 8.—At 4 o'clock yesterday morning, while the yacht Cedar Ridge, owned by Mr. L. L. Crocker, of East Buffalo, was being got ready for a trip down the river, and just as the engineer had started the fire two explosions occurred on board in rapid succession. The yacht at once took fire and burned to the water's edge. Of those on board the following were killed: Ethel and Larney Crocker, girls, burned; Howard Crocker, a boy, drowned, and Mr. Rubenstein.

A carpenter working on the dock was burned to death by his boat house taking fire from the boat.

The injured are: Charlotte Crocker and Miss McLean, a friend, both badly burned, and Engineer Peter Colmyer, burned.

The explosion was due to naphtha by which the boiler was heated. Mr. Crocker is superintendent of the New York Central stock yards at East Buffalo, and the three children killed belongs to him.

As soon as the explosions were heard, a boatman named Caleb Talsma got a boat, and hurrying alongside, picked up Miss McLean, who was badly burned. She was taken to Homeopathic hospital. She is about 28 years old.

The people who hurried to the scene were first attracted by the sight of Mr. Crocker's little son, who stood on the yacht's dock in a dazed condition, surrounded by flames. He seemed unable to move and when a man named Charles Schevengel reached a pike pole to him, the boy didn't take hold of it, and a moment later he fell back into the fire and was burned to a crisp in full view of the horrified spectators.

Mr. Schevengel's face was badly scalded while he was trying to get the little boy to grasp the pole. Attention was now directed to John Rubenstein, the carpenter, a man about 30 years old, who was clinging to a rafter that extended out over the yacht. He could not be reached, and after hanging a few moments he apparently became suffocated and dropped into the flames below. He leaves a widow and five small children. Two other children of Mr. Crocker Leonard Lemuel, aged 10 years and Ethel, aged 9 years, also perished in the flames. Another child, Charlotte, aged 14 years, was blown into the water whence she was rescued and sent with Miss McLean to the hospital.

The yacht was what is known as a naptha launch, the fuel being naptha. It was of fifteen tons burden. It is supposed that some defect in the tank allowed the naptha to leak out and when the engineer struck a match to light the fuel under the boiler the loose naptha exploded. The boat was bought by Mr. Crocker in New York last spring. It is completely destroyed, as is also the boat house.

Miss McLean was visiting the Crocker family from Detroit. Mr. Crocker himself barely escaped with his life. He is almost crazed by his bereavement. His wife has been very ill, and it is feared she cannot survive this shock.

The condition of Miss McLean and Charlotte Crocker is reported serious, but not necessarily fatal.

G. A. R. in the South.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 8.—A memorable ceremony will take place here on Friday next, when the Robert Anderson post, the first post of the G. A. R. in South Carolina, will be mustered in within the walls of Fort Sumter. There was a post of the G. A. R. in this city in 1870, but it was composed mostly of colored men and politicians. The present post is composed of Union soldiers who have settled here since the war, all white and none of them politicians. It is named after the gallant Anderson, who defended the fort against the state troops in 1861, and has a roll of about thirty members. The command will be escorted to Fort Sumter at 2 p. m. on Friday by a number of Confederate veterans, who held the fort for over four years against the Union troops.

A Big Fire in Fort Wayne, Indiana.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Aug. 8.—A loss of about $150,000 was caused by a fire which started last night in A. C. Trentman's building on Calhoun street. The fire burned three hours, and entailed losses as follows: A. C. Trentman, loss on building, $12,500; Trentman estate, building, $16,000; Mrs. H. G. Wagner, building, $5,000; Renner Cratzley Company, book and stationary store, loss on stock, $50,000; Louis Wolf & Company, dry goods, loss on stock, $50,000; Stern, Mautner & Friendlich, clothiers, loss on stock, $20,000. The total insurance against these losses is $157,000. The origin of the fire is not known.

Explosion of Chemicals.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—By an explosion of chemicals used in preparing the fireworks for the spectacular production of "The Siege of Sebastopol," which occurred at 11:30 yesterday at Kensington's garden in the western part of the city, John Smith and Dick Lightner were seriously, perhaps fatally burned, and $500 worth of property was destroyed. Prompt action of employes and the fire department saved the scenery and the garden.

Fight in a Butcher Shop.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—During a quarrel yesterday afternoon over some trifling matter, between Adolph Whitman and John Richter, two butchers employed in a packing house at the stock yards, Whitman struck Richter with a piece of meat. The latter leaped to his feet with a large butcher knife in his hand and plunged the blade into Whitman's heart. Whitman fell to the floor dead. Richter was arrested.

Mrs. Harrison Goes to Nantucket, N. Y.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. Mrs. Harrison, wife of the president, accompanied by Col. Wilson and her maid, arrived at 12:30 yesterday. Mrs. Harrison left on the Fall River boat last night, and will go to Nantucket to visit her sister, who is sick.

Burke the Suspect.

The Police Believe That He Was One of the Murderers.

RUMORS OF A CONFESSION.

A Much Needed Missing Link Discovered. A Writ of Habeas Corpus Issued for Burke's Release—A Mysterious Conference of the Authorities.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The police authorities claim to be in possession of evidence which proves that Burke was one of the actual murderers of Cronin. At the same time they intimate that both Burke and Cooney were in this matter the dupes of Coughlin and Coughlin's bosses. They hold, therefore, that he is not responsible for the murder; that it grew out of Burke and Cooney's Irish fanaticism.

A rather startling admission has been made by a police captain. He said: "We have evidence showing that Dan. Coughlin was in the Carlson cottage when Dr. Cronin entered. This evidence is not hearsay, but straight and direct. It supplies a much needed missing link."

The state's attorney is after a North Side city employe, who is a senior guardian of one of the Clan-na-Gael camps, and who threatens with bodily injury any Clan-na-Gael man who urges his fellows to tell all they know about the Cronin matter. This man is frequently drunk, carries a revolver, which he sometimes flourishes, and is quite free in using the epithets "traitor" and "spy."

A Mysterious Conference.

About 10:30 o'clock State's Attorney Longenecker, Chief Hubbard and other police officials, together with half a dozen friends of Dr. Cronin, called at the armory and held a private conference. The object of the visit could not be learned, but it was rumored that it had something to do with Burke's alleged promise to reveal what he knew about the crime. None of the officials would confirm this, however. There was an air of mystery about the station, and all those who are believed to be "on the inside" were as dumb as oysters when approached for information.

Habeas Corpus Proceedings.

Yesterday Judge Baker issued a writ of habeas corpus, directed to Chief Hubbard, for the release of Martin Burke from the cell in the Harrison street station, in which he now reposes. The writ was obtained by Lawyer Kennedy, of Appleton, Wis., who has so far been refused permission to see his client. It was returnable at 3 o'clock, but was issued with the understanding that if the officials permitted Kennedy to see Burke before that hour the matter should be dropped.

Chief Hubbard at 3 o'clock replied to the writ of habeas corpus issued for the release of Burke, saying that the prisoner was not in his custody, that he was being held by one John Collins on a requisition from the United States on the government of Manitoba and Great Britain. Burke's attorneys then drew up a new petition asking that a writ of habeas corpus be directed to Collins, and Judge Baker issued an order for a writ as prayed for, returnable to-morrow.

SEIZURE OF THE BLACK DIAMOND.

Official Information Just Reaches the Treasury Department.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The report of Capt. Shepard, commanding the revenue steamer Rush, in regard to the seizure of the British sealer Black Diamond, which was mailed at San Francisco, has been received at the treasury department. Acting Secretary Batcheller refuses positively to give it to the press, but admits that it confirms substantially the newspaper reports concerning the seizure.

It contains no reference whatever to the escape of the vessel for the reason that that had not occurred when it was written. Neither does it give any explanation with regard to the smallness of the crew placed in charge of the prize, but the report is said to indicate that the vessel was not paroled, but was subject only to the control of the prize crew. Acting Secretary Batcheller said that as the question seems to have assumed political importance, he preferred to do nothing whatever in the matter without consultation with Secretary Windom upon his return to the city.

Mysterious Murders.

HELENA, Mont., Aug. 8.- The finding of the dead bodies of Ollie Jones, his wife and two other persons, was reported yesterday evening from Carvallis, a small town in Butler Root valley, in western Montana. A young girl who had been shot in the hip, was also found on Big Hole mountain. All of the dead had been shot in the back. A party was formed to bring in the bodies. No further details of the affair could be obtained, as Carvallis is without telegraphis facilities. Jones was married at Missoula three weeks ago and was on the road to his ranch.

Twenty-Eight Soldiers Desert.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. -Twenty-eight United States soldiers deserted the barracks on David's island late Monday night. The authorities have endeavored to keep the matter quiet, but one of the deserters was captured on Hart's island yesterday, and the story leaked out.

Pennsylvania Republicans.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 8.—The Republican state convention met here yesterday and unanimously renominated Hon. Henry K. Boyer for the office of state treasurer. Mr. Boyer is the present treasurer of the state, having already served two terms.

THE CONSTITUTION FRAMERS

Almost Through With Their Work at Bismarck—Filibustering at Helena.

BISMARCK, N. Dak., Aug. 8.—The constitutional convention at yesterday's session discussed the question of railroad taxation, and adopted the section providing that railroads shall be taxed at not less than $3,000 nor more than $7,000 per mile. In the afternoon the report of the committee on public institutions, locating the capital permanently at Bismarck, etc., was adopted. It is now predicted that the convention will adjourn within a week.

Filibustering at Helena.

HELENA, Mont., Aug. 8.—There was a fight in the constitutional convention yesterday over the location of the capital. In committee Bozeman was agreed upon, but upon this being reported to the convention the friends of other cities filibustered until recess was ordered.

Another Daring Train Robbery.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 8.—A dispatch received here says that the Rio Grande western train, known as the "Modoc," was held up by train robbers near Crevasse, last night. They forced the fireman to attempt to chop through the door of the express car, but as he was unable to force the boiler iron door, they gave it up and went through the train with drawn revolvers and collected $900 and twenty watches. Most of the passengers were successful in hiding their valuables. A posse has started in pursuit of the robbers.

It May Not Be Tate.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 8.—The man arrested at Scottsboro has not yet been positively identified as the absconding treasurer, Tate. One of the detectives who arrested him has been arrested on an indictment for burglary.

THE COKERS' STRIKE.

Not a Car of Coke to Be Had in the Connellsville Region.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Aug. 8.—The cokers at the Red Stone works of J. M. Schoonmaker have joined the strike. This, together with the information that the operators at Gallitzon had granted the advance asked for, filled the strikers with joy and renewed confidence. At noon Frick & Company were in secret conference with the leaders of the strike. It is reported that Frick & Company have offered an advance of 10 per cent. over former wages, but that the strikers will not accept the terms. This offer, however, is 33½ per cent. of an advance over that previously made.

It is also reported that McClure & Company have asked for a compromise in a 10 per cent. advance, but this, it is said, will also be refused.

The mass meeting held yesterday was the largest ever held in the coke region. About 10,000 strikers were present. A resolution was adopted demanding uniform prices for all grades of labor; that one cent per bushel shall hereafter be the minimum rate, with a proportionate advance for all day labor and coke drawing.

There is not a car of coke to be had in the entire region, and cars from the western iron and steel mills are standing on the side tracks of all the works. It is stated here that some of the works in Ohio and Illinois are badly crippled on account of the strike.

A Deputy Shot.

BRADDOCK, Pa., Aug. 8.—An attempt was made yesterday to break the strike at the Carrie furnace by bringing in new men. Several had been driven away during the morning, and at 12:30 o'clock others got off the train at Keating Station and were met by deputies. The strikers followed and opened fire with a volley of stones. These not having the desired effect, pistols were used and one of the deputies was shot. The injured man was carried to the furnace office. The extent of his injuries could not be ascertained.

Arbitrators Report.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The arbitrators selected to adjust the difference existing between the Coal Run miners and operators of Streator, have submitted their conclusions. J. E. Williams and Lyman J. Gage unite in finding that seventy-two and one-half cents per ton is a fair price for mining coal, while William P. Rend believes that seventy-seven and one-half cents should be the price, and is willing to go no lower than seventy-five cents in a compromise. The men struck last May against a reduction from eighty cents to seventy cents per ton. The miners will hold a meeting to-morrow to take official action on the matter. The articles of arbitration state that the award of any members of the committee shall be binding upon both parties. It is believed that both sides will abide by the decision.

The English Gobbles Up Another Brewery.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Lawyer Untermeyer, who recently returned from England after several months' absence, has just stated that he had perfected the sale of the Henry Elias Brewing company, of this city, while abroad. The price to be paid by the English syndicate is $850,000. Mr. Untermeyer also stated that there is no statement in which the English market takes in American industries.

THE treaty negotiations with the Sioux have been made complete, and "Young-man-proud of-his-tail" is on his way home.

IT is said that the number of divorce cases chronicled in the State during the past six months is unprecedented. It is to the shame of the men, too, that the women have been, in most part the plaintiffs, the principle cause being cruelty and neglect. The lawyers have found this kind of law to be the most profitable.

WITH its record of fire, flood and disaster, the year 1889 will go on history as the most dreadful. The calamities have not been confined to localities, but have been scattered throughout the country, calling forth the aid and sympathy of all humanity. There has been taught an awful lesson, which has been effective in bringing out the best there is in human nature, a feeling for the sufferings of fellow-beings.

THE Irishman Burke who is so strongly suspected of being concerned in the Cronin murder is now lodged safely in the cell formerly occupied by the Anarchist, Lingg, in the Chicago jail. It is announced that Burke, together with the other "suspects" Coughlin, Beggs, Woodruff and Kunze, will be brought to trial on August 23. It is to be hoped that the dark mystery of Cronin's murder will then be probed to the very bottom, and that no guilty man, however high or low his station, will be permitted to escape.

ANOTHER duel is reported among the "chivalry." This time the contest took place in Louisiana, and the antagonists were a young married man and his father-in-law. It was well known that the duel was to take place, and fifty men stood and looked calmly on while these two near relatives shot each other. The elder one of the duelists was fatally wounded. No one seems to have made the slightest effort to prevent the bloody and barbarous affair. Apparently it is about time that Louisiana took her place along with Arkansas as one of the uncivilized States of the Union.

FOR an "off year" this seems to have brought a good deal of politics along. Fifteen States hold elections. The work commenced Monday in Kentucky with the election of a State Treasurer. There will be six gubernatorial elections this year. These will be in Iowa, New Jersey, Mississippi, Virginia, Massachusetts and Ohio. New York elects a State ticket headed by a Secretary of State. Pennsylvania votes on State Treasurer. Maryland elects a State Comptroller and Nebraska a Supreme Court Judge. Four new States—North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington—must adopt constitutions and elect Congressmen as well as entire State tickets.

THE man who occupies the highest office within the gift of the American people is keeping the signal office at the summit of Pike's Peak. Concerning this summer resort he says: "Sometimes I stand at the window with my telescope. The wind without is keen and cutting as a knife. I can see the houses in Colorado Springs, twenty miles away, the visitors sitting in their shirt sleeves, sipping iced drinks to keep cool, and ladies walking about in white summer robes. I lower the glass; the summer scene is gone. Green trees, animal life, men and women fade away like creatures in a dream, and I am the only living thing in the world of eternal ice, and snow, and silence."

SINCE, in the course of human events, another Republican editor of Marion is put in a position where he will gain more than a corporation notoriety, it is whispered he is an applicant for the postoffice.—The Mirror.

Ordinarily we should not deem this worth a denial, but since ridiculous aspirations to the postoffice are in style we do deny it for fear a few misguided ones take stock in it. Such a rumor was given some currency, doubtless as a joke. The editor of the STAR has not done enough toward making the county 800 democratic majority in the county to make him a fit candidate to measure chances with the esteemed Mr. Crawford. No, there is no one here seeking any appointment, though the absurd appointments and ridiculous candidacies that prevail are enough to justify just such a thing.

—An exchange says: "Persons who wish to clear their lawns of plantains may do so with little labor and small expense. A gentleman who knows whereof he speaks, says that plantain may be easily destroyed with turpentine. To apply it put the turpentine in a small oil can and put two or three drops on each leaf. It is not necessary to put turpentine on every leaf. The turpentine dropped on a leaf makes its way down the stem to the root of the plant. A few drops are sufficient to kill any one plant. In a few hours after the turpentine is dropped on the plant the leaves wither and the plant dies."

WOMEN TO THE FRONT

[From the Toledo Commercial.]

A singular case has just occurred in the probate court of this county. Mrs. Mary Ann Reston, an inmate of the home for old ladies, recently died. She had made a will, being the owner of property, and designated as her executor a married lady who is prominently connected with that benevolent institution. Judge Cumming, in obedience to the request of the will, appointed the lady named as executor of the estate. This is the first case in Ohio, and probably in the country, where a woman has been appointed to such a position. The appointment is made under a recent statute which apparently justifies the act.

It is claimed, also, that women may act as appraisers of property, the law only requiring that "persons," freeholders, shall fill such position. Any woman, therefore, it is claimed, who is the owner of real estate and who possesses the requisite qualification, may serve in that capacity. Gradually and rapidly the laws of Ohio have been changed respecting the rights of women until now about the only difference is in respect to the right of women to vote. Ohio has been in the lead in this class of legislation, owing, no doubt, to the fact that this state has been blessed with a large number of able women who have taken an interest in securing such legislation as they felt was needed for the protection of their just rights than any other state in the Union. It is equally true that a large number of these women have resided in Toledo, and their pens have had much to do in bringing about these reforms. It is, therefore, seemingly proper that the first case of the kind above cited should occur here.

THE ANIMAL KINGDOM.

Within two blocks of the most fashionable residential portion of Kansas City is a prairie dog town with three or four hundred burrows.

A grizzly tried to capture a cow on the Flores ranch, near Santa Maria, Cal. The cow and bear both went over a high bank and were found dead.

A male partridge hatched out a nest of hen's eggs on a plantation at Irwinton, Ga. Biddy had laid the eggs in the woods and abandoned them.

The largest number of wild beasts ever shipped on a single vessel from Hamburg, the great animal market, left there recently for the zoological gardens of Buenos Ayres.

A horse over nineteen hands high and weighing 2,500 pounds was shipped from Myerstown, Pa., to Boston recently. The purchaser will put the animal on exhibition.

The lady clerks in the Philadelphia post office have a lunch room on the second floor. They entertain two or three cats sent from Virginia, which were brought north in mail bags.

A citizen of Erie, Pa., had a full blooded Irish setter dog, which, while on a railroad track, located a bird. No one was near, and instinct was so strong in the animal that he would not move and was run down by a train.

Realism in art will have an extraordinary revelation in New York, when a lion, painted by a Boston artist, is placed in position. The owner of the picture, a hotel man, will illuminate the lion with electricity and place it behind a row of real bars.

A sea turtle ten feet long, five feet wide and weighing 1,000 pounds, was caught recently in a trap off South Harwich, Cape Cod. This monster is estimated to be 200 years old. As it stands the distance between its fore flippers is over ten feet.

A strolling Italian musician in Philadelphia has an improvement on the monkey. It is a parrot which sings operatic music in a soprano voice that is heard for squares, and then collects coins from high windows. The bird can fly where the monkey would fail to reach.

A singular bird was recently shot on the Kissimmee river in Florida. It was black, with a body smaller than an ordinary chicken, long, slim neck, small head, large beak, about five inches long, straight to the end, where both upper and lower turn down; very small, short legs, with feet half webbed; long forked tail, and immense wings that measured seven and a half feet from tip to tip.

THE LATEST IN JEWELS.

Scenes of monastery life etched on an oxidized silver call bell have a pretty effect.

A large silver horse shoe nail twisted in the shape of an "S" finds favor as a belt buckle.

Two sprays of violets mounted on gold are pendants to a glove button recently brought out.

Dolphins disporting around a shapely water nymph is a new decoration for a silver water pitcher.

Miniature watches are now being set in the large link bracelets which have become so popular.

A handsome pendant for a queen chain is a small fan with alternate leaves of gold and pearl shell.

Two small cat's eyes set in the place of eyes in a miniature owl produce a rather startling effect as a brooch.

A diamond chicken roosting on one leg in the center of a crescent of rubies and emeralds is a fashionable oddity.

A thread of small diamonds inserted across the center of an ivy leaf of green enamel is a dainty piece of workmanship.

A silver paper knife, with a handle representing the leg and talons of an eagle, is an attractive and artistic novelty.

A bright gold bird perched upon a bar pin and pecking at an accurately produced bunch of grapes is receiving attention.

A small thermometer mounted on an oxidized silver model of the Eiffel tower is becoming a fashionable ornament.

Huckleberries of black enamel on a branch of gold leaves intermingled with diamonds form an exceedingly tasteful brooch.

Among scarf pin novelties a variegated gold neon resting on a background formed by two leaves is one of the most recent.

A rudder and tiller of gold, crossed in the center of a rope of the same metal, is an appropriate pendant for the present season.—Jewelers' Weekly.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Sir Julian Pauncefote wisely postponed the purchase of a farm until his wife comes over and has time to look about a bit.

John Bright said that he owed his quick imagination to his lifelong habit of reading poetry every night before going to bed.

Sir George Trevelyan is said to be a notably brilliant conversationalist; versatile, tireless, encyclopedic; almost Macaulayesque.

Buffalo Bill has written to a friend in Colorado that he has received proposals of marriage from twenty-seven wealthy Parisiennes.

Walter Savage Landor was the name on a card sent in the other day to a London publisher. It belongs to a grandson of its illustrious first owner.

The Comte de Paris, head of the Bourbon family and author of a history of our civil war, rises at 5:30 o'clock in summer and at 6 o'clock in the winter.

Senator Cantor has been substituted for Bourke Cockran as the orator before the Hop Growers' association, at their annual meeting on the shores of Oneida lake.

The portrait which Sir John Millais is painting of Mr. Gladstone will, it is stated, be the thirty-sixth that the right honorable gentleman has had painted during his life.

Again they are talking of putting up a statue of Wendell Phillips in Boston. The man who designs it should bear in mind the illustrious orator's remarks upon the existing monuments.

Some years ago the Hon. Francis D. Kernan had an eminent Chinaman for a client, and won his case. Ever since the latter has sent, several times a year, a box of choice tea to his lawyer as a token of remembrance.

Geronimo, the Apache who has been a prisoner for some time, has grown so fat that he looks very little like an ideal chieftain. He was not well at Fort Augustine, but at Mount Vernon Barracks, Ala., he has increased in weight rapidly.

QUEER FINDS.

Rhoda Weimer, of Shelbyville, Ind., caught a three pound black bass the other day and found in it a silver quarter.

A buried city in Honduras containing relics in profusion has been unearthed 250 miles from the mouth of the Partook river, among the Peyas Indians.

A large darning needle was found in the liver of a deer recently killed in the presence of a nobleman near Vienna. A Viennese microscopist, who examined the liver, found it to be sound save in the immediate proximity of the needle.

ORATORY AS A FINE ART.

ELABORATE TRAINING OF A SPEAKER IN THE OLDEN TIME.

Long Windedness Cultivated as a Fine Art. The Decline Due to the Diffusion of Cheap Literature—Good Speaking as Important Now as Ever.

In antiquity the training of an orator was almost as elaborate an affair as the training of a race horse is with us. Not only the voice, but the whole man, physical, intellectual and moral, was carefully prepared, with conscientious minuteness of detail, for the great business of life, the making of speeches. In his system of education the development of the voice naturally held a large place, and the phonascus, or voice driller, was an indispensable accessory, not only of every school of oratory, but of many formed orators. Of the methods of the phonascus we know little, but we find hints in some of the classical writers that, like certain of his professional brethren in more recent days, he was not disinclined to magnify his office. Seneca, in one of his letters, warns his friend against living, vocally speaking, in subjection to his phonascus, and implies that he might as well keep another artist to superintend his walking. In our own day the phonascus still survives in public life, though perhaps more as a luxury than an acknowledged necessity.

SIX HOUR SPEECHES.

A celebrated novelist, dramatic author and orator, who passed over to the great majority many years ago, used always to put himself under the guidance of a vocal mentor before delivering a speech. Every tone, every pose and every gesture was carefully prepared and industriously practiced, under the direction of Mr. Frederick Webster, brother of the celebrated comedian, Benjamin Webster. That the elaborate training of the ancients was eminently successful is shown by the powers of endurance which it is clear they must have possessed. They habitually spoke for five or six hours, and even longer, and, in order to appreciate their staying power, it must be remembered that they spoke in the open air, amid all the tumult of the forum, which was capable of holding 80,000 people, and with an amount of vigor of action of which the gesticulations of an Italian preacher are but a pale reflex.

Longwindedness was at one time cultivated as a fine art by Roman orators, when they had to plead before a judge whom they supposed to be in favor of the other side. These prototypes of our modern obstructionists were aptly termed moratores, or delayers, because they postponed as far as possible the passing of the sentence. The abuse finally reached such a height that a law had to be passed limiting the length of pleadings in public cases to the running out of one clepsydra. It is impossible to say exactly what period of time this was equivalent to, as the water clocks of the Romans were of different sizes, and the rapidity of flow must have varied under different circumstances; from twenty minutes to half an hour may, however, be taken as roughly representing the average length of a speech under this strict system of "closure."

PRESENT NEED OF TRAINING.

If the Romans carried the culture of the speaking voice to a pedantic extreme, we, on the other hand, undoubtedly neglect it too much. It is not that we speak less, but that we have less appreciation than the ancients had of oratory as a fine art, and we are therefore more tolerant of mumbling utterances and slovenly delivery. Many an inarticulate speaker, who in those days hums and haws through an hour or two of dreary platitudes, would have been hooted down in five minutes by a Greek or Roman audience.

The comparative decay of orators in modern times is due to the diffusion of cheap literature; the function of the public speaker has been to a great extent made obsolete by the daily newspapers. Information and arguments on political matters, which had formerly to be supplied by word of mouth from the rostrums, are now served up, spiced to each reader's taste, by innumerable "able editors."

But though the necessity for what I may call professional orators no longer exists, a large part of the business of the state in a free country must still be carried on or controlled by talk, and the living voice must always have a power of stirring and swaying popular sentiment—the collective feeling of large masses of men, which is something more than the sum of their individual feelings—far beyond the reach of the pen.

John Bright's exquisite purity of style would have made him a most effective writer, but would his great speeches, if cut up into leading articles, have stirred the national heart as did his burning words, thrown red hot among a living mass of enthusiastic hearers?

On the whole, I think we use the voice in public even more than the ancients, and there is, therefore, all the more reason for its being properly trained. Good speaking is now adays important, not only from the artistic, but from the business point of view; and even for "practical men" it cannot be a waste of time to acquire so valuable a faculty.—Sir Morell Mackenzie in Contemporary Review.

Legal Bon Mots.

Sergt. Murphy was the author of some excellent bon mots. When Mme. Soyer died the famous chef asked Murphy for an epitaph. She had been a lady of an arrogant temper, "and it was generally rumored that the poor cook had rather a warmer time of it at home than he had in the club kitchen." Murphy's suggestion for an epitaph was "Soyer tranquille." A physician who was thinking of calling out some one who had insulted him came to consult Murphy about the matter. "Take my advice," Murphy said, "and instead of calling him out get him to call you in and have your revenge that way; it will be much more secure and certain."—Robinson in Bench and Bar.

ANTIQUITY OF THE GLOVE.

An Emblem of Power and of Purity, of Defiance and Subjection.

No article of attire has more of interest in its associations and history than gloves; for while the interest attaching to most other garments has been mainly that of utility, to gloves has been attached a varied and widespread symbolism, giving them an exalted place and linking them with many curious observances, regal, ecclesiastical, military and social.

The glove has been the emblem of power and of purity, of defiance and subjection. Lands and personal property were once conveyed by the delivery of a glove; the authority of kings over provinces was attested by presenting a glove; kings invested barons with dominion by bestowing on the favorite one of the kingly gloves; and many ecclesiastical and legal ceremonies could only be performed with white gloves, the emblems of purity.

The antiquity of gloves is very great; they doubtless antedate history, for the earliest literature alludes to them, and they have been known and worn from the earliest ages of which we have any knowledge. Homer, in the "Odyssey," describes Laertes, the farmer king, the father of Ulysses, in his retirement: "While gloves secured his hands to shield them from the thorns." Xenophon jeers at the Persians for wearing gloves as a protection from the cold; not only did they have umbrellas borne over them in summer, not being content with the shade of the trees and rocks, but in the winter it is not sufficient for them to clothe their heads, and their bodies, and their feet, but they have coverings made of hair for their hands and their fingers. In their earlier days the Greeks and the Romans scorned such effeminacy, but at a later day, in the time of Pliny, the uncle of that lively historian is described as traveling with an amanuensis "who wore gloves upon his hands in winter lest the severity of the weather should make him lose any time" in writing.

From time immemorial the glove has had a legal significance in oriental countries in the transfer of property, just as the "God's penny" was formerly used to "bind a bargain" in the west. A disputed passage in the Old Testament—Ruth iv, 7 and 8—reads: "Now this was the manner in former time in Israel, concerning redeeming and concerning changing, for to confirm all things; a man plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbor, and this was a testimony in Israel." It is now commonly agreed by scholars that the word shoe should be rendered glove, for in the Chaldaic paraphrase the word is rendered "the case or covering of the right hand;" and accepting this view, it appears that among the Israelites the passing of a glove was the method of transferring property.

Later the glove, as a pledge or emblem of conveyance, came into use among the Romans, whose ancient law held property to have passed with its literal transfer, or part of it, into the hand of the purchaser; and the glove, doubtless as a matter of convenience, took the place of and symbolized this actual transfer.—Haberdasher.

Sun Baths Better Than Shade Trees.

"There is such a thing as having too much of a good thing," remarked a Cass avenue man to a friend. "I like trees, but I don't like to live in the woods. Every glimpse I get of the heavens or the earth from my windows in summer is caught on the fly, as it were, between the branches of trees."

"Why don't you cut them down?" inquired his friend.

"I would cheerfully, if they were my own, but unfortunately my landlord owns them and compels me to live in their shade. There are hundreds of houses in Detroit that never have a glint of sunshine from May to November, and the people in them are as bilious as East Indians. The average Detroiter is afraid to trim his trees so that they shall present a respectable appearance, and you can walk up any of the avenues and count hundreds of lopsided, awkward looking trees that have run all to branches. The result is damp houses, malaria and typhoid fever."

"I haven't any trees," said the friend "If I had I would go home and burn them, after such a picture as that."

"It is the truth. We live too much in the shade. Sun baths are better than shade trees of forest growth. It is well enough to shade the streets, but not the houses. Facts are facts, sir."—Detroit Free Press.

It Was a Wet Day.

John Barnes, the baseball manager, while over in Ireland looking after the fortune that had been left him there, was, of course, in Dublin part of the time. It was a damp, drizzly day when he arrived there, but he was bound to take a look over the city, even if it was necessary to undergo a drenching in the attempt. So the St. Paul manager stepped into a jaunting car, or some other sort of Irish conveyance, for a drive about the town. Passing through Phœnix park he noticed three great statues, presumably the counterfeits in bronze of national heroes. "What are those?" John asked of his fine Celtic driver. "Thim"—was the confident reply—"thim's the twelve apostles." "Twelve!" exclaimed the great baseball manager; "why, man, there are only three of them." "True yez are, sor, true yez are; but yez can't expect the whole twelve to come out on a wet day like this—ha (to the horse), ge lang, ye brute." This may be an old joke on the other side, but as the genial manager took pains to bring it across the ocean it is cheerfully awarded space in this column.—The Casual Listener in St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Absentees Were There.

A young Englishman, on a visit to Ireland during the shooting season (says America), asked his host if there were many of the neighboring land holders then at home.

"Divil a one, faith!" was the answer, "the counthry is schwarming with absentees."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A BRIGHT BOY'S ANSWER.

He Gets Job and the Tobacco Question a Little Mixed.

A learned pedagogue at Nantucket used every morning to read passages in the Bible and expound the same as he proceeded, in order that, by asking questions as to how much they remembered of his comments, he might ascertain who were the bright boys of the school. On one occasion he read from the book of Job thus:

"There was a man in the land of Uz, and his name was Job, who feared God and eschewed evil."

"This means, boys," said the master, "that he eschewed evil as I do tobacco: he would have nothing to do with it."

With this very clear and forcible elucidation of the word "eschew," he proceeded, and a number of verses were read and commented on in a similar clear and intelligent manner.

A few days afterward the school committee called to make an examination. The master called the boys up and began to put them through an examination.

"Who was the man that lived in Uz?" he asked of one of the brightest little fellows.

"Job."

"Was he a good man?"

"Yes."

"What did he do?"

"He chewed tobacco when nobody else would have anything to do with it," was the boy's answer.

That answer ended the examination for the day.—Nebraska State Journal.

Feminine Repartee.

Miss Retrouse (saucily)—When you are old, Clara, your nose will meet your chin.

Miss Aquiline (calmly)—Well, dear, that's more than yours will ever do unless it goes around the other way.—Scribner's Magazine.

The Time to Dodge Old Bills.

He had been standing in front of a house on Second avenue and gazing at the front windows for a long ten minutes, when a pedestrian halted to inquire:

"Anything the matter with that house?"

"No, I guess not."

"But you were looking at it?"

"Yes; it is shut up."

"Can't a house be shut up?"

"Certainly, but in this case it was very sudden. I am a collector. I was up here last evening to collect an old bill, and the debtor gave me a glass of wine and asked me as a great favor to call at 8 o'clock this morning. I was here a quarter of an hour ahead of time."

"What does that sign on the door read?"

"'Gone to the seashore for two months.' That's the fourth one I've lost just this way in the last week, and to-morrow I will take my station at the depot and try and head the rest off."—Detroit Free Press.

Bread Pills.

A half famished fellow tells of a baker whose loaves had been growing smaller by degrees and beautifully less, who, when going on his round to serve his customers, stopped at the door of one of them and knocked. The lady within exclaimed:

"Who's there?" and was answered,

"The baker."

"What do you want?"

"To leave your bread."

"Well, you needn't make such a fuss about it; put it through the key hole."—London Tid Bits.

Modern Barbarity.

Regina—What barbarous things these prize fights are, Claudia!

Claudia—Yes; it makes me indignant to read how they are conducted.

Regina—And yet we think ourselves more civilized than the Romans.

Claudia (regretfully)—Indeed, I don't think we are. Why, the Romans were not barbarous enough to exclude ladies and children from the gladiatorial combats. They were just like matinees, and everybody could go.—Munsey's Weekly.

Seeing for Himself.

Mrs. Prim—Good morning, Tommy. Did your mother send you in?

Tommy (aged 8)—No'm. I thought I would like to make a call.

Mrs. Prim—That is very nice, I am sure. But you mustn't be bashful on your first call. Can't you raise your eyes from the carpet?

Tommy—Oh, I'm not bashful, but mother says your carpet is so ugly it makes her sick to look at it, and I thought I would come in and try it myself.—Commercial Bulletin.

Cause and Effect.

A countryman was ordering a tombstone for his brother.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS.

SUBJECTS OF A PRACTICAL NATURE SURE TO INTEREST READERS.

Strophanthus, the New Medicinal Agent Which Is Being Daily Brought to the Notice of the Profession—The Pressure of the Atmosphere.

Strophanthus seems to possess an unusual degree of merit, and is likely to become well known. Strophanthus is the name of a genus of tropical shrubs belonging to the Apocynaceæ. They are of a twining habit, and send out long branches, which twine around the trees of the forest, forming, in many cases, an almost impenetrable jungle. They flower in April and May, and later produce the fruit, in the shape of a pod, from twelve to eighteen inches long, containing from two to three hundred plumose seeds, one of which is represented in the cut in its natural size.

La Nature tells that the seeds have long been used by the natives of Africa in preparing poison for their arms. The active principle of the plant is a glucoride known as strophanthin. Strophanthin is one of the most powerful poisons known. The action of the poison seems to be especially directed to the heart and other voluntary and involuntary muscles, but does not seem to affect the nerves or spinal cord.

Such powerful agent is of value as a heart tonic and diuretic. Dr. Bucquoy, of Paris, claims that there is an absence of any cumulative action, so characteristic of digitalis, which it otherwise closely resembles in its physiological action. The reports hitherto given of the results obtained from the use of this drug are somewhat conflicting, but it is undoubtedly a cardiac tonic of value. Professor Frazier uses it in form of a tincture made from the seeds. The absence of any cumulative action, if confirmed, is also an important property. It is not likely to entirely replace digitalis, but will be used when a decided temporary influence is required. It is said to have given excellent results in renal affections with secondary failure of the heart.

Mortality in New York City.

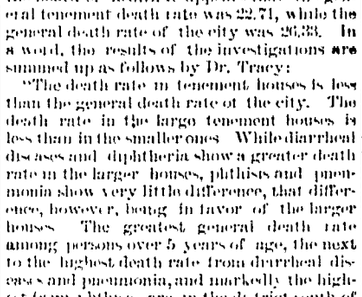
According to a report upon the mortality of New York city for 1888 by Dr. Tracy to the board of health it appears that the general tenement death rate was 22.71, while the general death rate of the city was 26.33. In a word, the results of the investigations are summed up as follows by Dr. Tracy:

"The death rate in tenement houses is less than the general death rate of the city. The death rate in the large tenement houses is less than in the smaller ones. While diarrheal diseases and diphtheria show a greater death rate in the larger houses, phthisis and pneumonia show very little difference, that differences, however, being in favor of the larger houses. The greatest general death rate among persons over 5 years of age, the next to the highest death rate from diarrheal diseases and pneumonia, and markedly the highest from phthisis, are in the district south of Fourteenth street and west of Broadway. The excessive mortality in this part of the city is probably connected with the great number of old houses and the dampness of the soil. These results are much at variance with what was expected."

The Pressure of the Atmosphere.

The pressure of the atmosphere is transmitted in all directions. It, like any other mass of fluid, must necessarily transmit its pressure in all directions, upwards and laterally as well as downwards. The following experiment furnishes an illustration of this point:

A tumbler full of water is carefully covered with a sheet of paper, which is kept in position by one hand, while with the other the tumbler is inverted. Removing then the hand which held the paper, the water does not fall out, both water and paper being kept in position by the upward pressure (Fig. 2). The object of the paper is to present a flat surface of water, for otherwise the water would divide and would allow air to enter, and then the experiment would fail.



WINE TESTER. GLASS OF WATER INVERTED

The use of the wine tester also depends on the pressure of the atmosphere. It consists of a tin tube (Fig. 1) terminating at the bottom in a small cone, the end of which is open; at the top there is a small aperture, which is closed by the thumb. The two ends being open, the tube is immersed in the liquid to be tested; closing then the upper end by the thumb, as shown in the figure, the tube is withdrawn and remains filled in consequence of the pressure at the lower end. But if the thumb be withdrawn the pressure is transmitted both upwards and downwards, and the liquid flows out in obedience to the action of gravity.

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

Dining Room Novelties, Both Useful and Ornamental—Timely Recipes.

A hot potato napkin is one of the latest novelties in fancy napery. A half yard square of linen, either hemstitched or fringed, makes a good groundwork for decoration. Diagonally across one corner the words, "Hot potato," are worked in outline; the remaining corners are filled with potato blossoms, initials or small heaps of potatoes, as one's fancy dictates. Hot corn and hot roll napkins are made in the same way, varying the design to suit the subjects.

A fish napkin, for boiled fish, may be made out of fine linen, it should be forty inches long by twenty-three wide, with a piece ten inches long by seven wide cut out of each corner, which leaves the right sized flaps to turn over on the four sides. The flaps may be embroidered with some sea design in wash silk or simply an initial done in heavy "over and over" embroidery to match the remainder of the napery.

Many ladies economize by cutting off the hems of fine damask napkins, which have become worn, and fringing them out to the depth of an inch and a half, thereby converting them into pretty tea and fruit doilies.

Decorator and Furnisher, which gives the above notes, adds that the French fashion of using very large napkins is obtaining in a great measure. Those who wish to be in the extreme of fashion buy napkins a yard square, putting a heavily embroidered initial in one corner. Opposite corners of the tablecloth are decorated with the letter several sizes larger. Occasionally the whole name is embroidered diagonally across one corner in old script. Heavy overlaid embroidery is used for these decorations, no open work being allowed. The fashion of having one's name, initial or monogram wrought in the linen is fast giving out. Hotels and restaurants have a monopoly of that.

Freshening Up Japanned Ware.

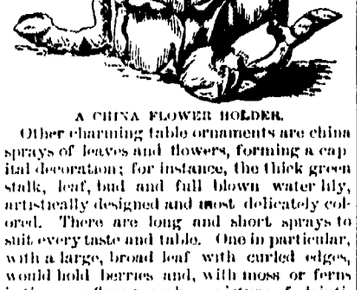
Enamel paints furnish the thrifty housewife a convenient means for renewing the freshness of japanned trays that have seen service. The following is a simple way of removing japan from tin utensils previous to putting on fresh paint or enamel: First scrub the tray well with a hard brush and very hot soda and water. When dry, rub it with coarse, and subsequently with finer, sandpaper. During the process the tray must stand on a perfectly flat surface, to avoid bending it in any way, also to insure perfect smoothness. When all the japan has given way to this friction, scrub the tray again with hot soda and water, dry it thoroughly with a clean soft cloth, and apply the paint or the enamel. The least dampness will prevent the enamel from setting.

Attractive Tomato Preserves.

To make very pretty looking tomato preserves take seven pounds of ripe, round yellow or egg tomatoes, peel them and let them stand together over night, with seven pounds sugar and the juice of three lemons. In the morning drain off the sirup and boil it, skimming well. Drop the tomatoes into it and boil gently for about twenty minutes. Lift out the fruit with a perforated skimmer and spread upon dishes. Boil the sirup down until it thickens, adding first, before taking it from the fire the juice of three lemons. Put the fruit into glass and fill up with hot sirup. When cold seal or tie up.

Ornaments for the Table.

The present style of low floral decorations for the dinner table is provided for by a variety of flower bowls in several sizes, the smaller ones to be placed at each plate and larger ones in the center of the table. Some very beautiful bowls are in cut glass, and their diamond like glitter, especially under gas light, adds much to the brilliancy of table decoration.



A CHINA FLOWER HOLDER.

Other charming table ornaments are china sprays of leaves and flowers, forming a capital decoration; for instance, the thick green stalk, leaf, bud and full blown water lily, artistically designed and most delicately colored. There are long and short sprays to suit every taste and table. One in particular, with a large, broad leaf with curled edges, would hold berries and, with moss or ferns in the open flower, make a picture of daintiness. Another novelty is the tulip shaped ornament represented in the cut. This is a center piece, and smaller pieces are made for the corners as well as buds for menu holders—a combination both novel and pleasing.

Citron Melon Preserve.

Slice and peel three large melons; remove the seeds and slice into pieces a little over an inch thick and about two inches long, weigh it and allow three-quarters of a pound of granulated sugar to each pound of melon. Scrape and cut into slices half a pound of fresh, green ginger. Put a pint of water into a preserving kettle, stir in the sugar and let it boil, stirring, till clear; put in the ginger and citron, and cook over a slow fire until pieces are tender and of a clear, transparent, pale yellow color. When it is about half cooked add from four to six lemons, according to taste. Take out the seeds and cut them in slices. The sirup should be about the color and consistency of rich maple sirup. Lay paper dipped in brandy closely over this preserve when cold, and tie up with stout brown paper and keep in a cool, dry place.

Fruit Vinegar.

Fruit vinegar can be made from any juicy sort of fruit, though raspberries are oftenest used. Mrs. S. D. Powers' directions for making it are as follows: Mash the fruit in a large bowl, adding a pint of white vinegar to every pound of fruit; cover and let stand a few days, till the fermentation ceases, and press through a bag. To each pint add half a pound of loaf sugar and bring it to a boil, skimming well. Boil gently half an hour. When cold bottle it and seal the corks. This makes a refreshing drink for fevers, or in warm weather, by mixing two or three spoonfuls in a glass of ice water.

How to Polish Sea Shells.

This item is particularly for the benefit of readers at the sea side. The shells are to be rubbed with hydrochloric acid, then washed in warm water, dried in hot sawdust and polished with chamois leather. If the shell is deficient in natural polish, rub the surface, using chamois leather with a mixture of tripoli powder and turpentine, then with tripoli alone, finishing off with olive oil.

Vanilla Ice Cream.

An inexpensive ice cream recipe for family use is as follows: Let one quart of milk come to a boil, add to it a tablespoonful of smooth arrowroot, and half a pound of sugar and two eggs beaten together. Boil the mixture, stirring constantly, till it thickens slightly. When cold add half a pint of cream, one and a half teaspoonful of vanilla extract and freeze.

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

FASHIONS THAT ARE APPROVED AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Mourning Attire—Fabrics That Are Provided for Summer Mourning—Attractive Toilets Designed to Wear at Garden Parties and on Other Similar Occasions.

In mourning, even for widows, French styles, which admit of much lighter attire than does the English mourning, with its yards upon yards of heavy crape trimmings, now prevail. The fashions in favor for colored dresses prevail to a considerable extent in mourning, the severe and simpler designs being selected as a rule.

A DESIRABLE TEA GOWN.

For summer morning grenadine and nun's veiling, in dull black finish, are favorite fabrics. The silk warped veilings are both light in weight and sensible. What is known in the stores as iron grenadine, a mixture of silk and wool, is equally popular with the sewing silk grenadines. The mourning silks include pongees, in dull black, armures and crepe de chine silks. Then there are for negligo wear sateens and ginghams, French lawns and mulls, in black and in black and white.

In the illustration is given a pleasing model for a tea gown, which may be rapidly changed to suit the emergencies of deep mourning, second mourning or the lightest kind just previous to putting on colors. It is made of silk, with black, white or gray silk under the lace front. The model shown is of black broche silk, with white silk linings.

For Beach and Seaside.

Serge is certainly the best material both for a lady and children for beach and seaside wear. There are many kinds, but what is called navy serge is the most durable, and stands wear and tear best and the action of the sea water. It is a very good plan to line the hem with leather, and to avoid all plaitings and frilling in the make of the dress. Let the children's frocks be made with the housemaid skirt, Garibaldi bodice, with full sleeves, and the washing sash, in narrow stripes of red and white, blue and yellow, etc. Little Mother Hubbard cloaks, gathered from throat to shoulders, in thin serge, are made for children, for wearing on the sea, traveling, or cold days. They have slits for the hands to pass through. For the lady, blue serge with a linen shirt, and an outdoor close fitting jacket, made by a tailor, is suggested as a serviceable dress.

Hairdressing.

There are now so many ways of dressing the hair that it is difficult to say which is the newest. Many people cover the back of the head with small bows and twists all over; others dress the hair still in a coil. The catogan is coming in and will, without doubt, be the fashion of the immediate future; the hair is combed down from the crown to the nape of the neck and tied with a ribbon bow, the ends left loose. A novel style is to cut the hair in a fringe all round the head and curl it, then comb and turn up all the rest to the top of the head and coil it there, securing it with several fancy combs. This style is worn with the Alsatian bonnets. With fair hair, the effect is good. The fringe is cut across the forehead, reaches to the tip of the ear, goes behind it and round the poll in a continuous curl.

Garden Party Toilet.

The season is at hand for garden parties, and we present a very charming toilet for these and similar occasions.

The gown is of cream tussore silk, made over a kilted skirt gathered at the waist. The bodice is finished with green moire revers and sash. The deep cuffs are also moire. The pointed draperies are embroidered in floral patterns. Attention is called to the parasol, with its garniture of green ribbons; also to the hat trimmings of green ribbon and honeysuckle flowers and foliage.

Fashion Notes.

The four-in-hand capes are becoming very popular. They are in white, red, fawn and other colored cloth, with turned over or upright collars of either velvet or embroidery, tied with ribbon. They have three, or at most four, deep capes, and only reach to the waist. They are worn at theatres as well as for driving.

Dresses are now cut out in a deep round in the neck. This style, however, is becoming only to young, full figures, and all others should be cautious about adopting it.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Accidents Caused During the Bathing Season by Ignorance or Indiscretion.

The bathing season year by year exacts a fatal tribute from the ignorant and indiscreet. Of a young man recently drowned, it is told that he entered the water soon after partaking of a hearty meal, and the fatal result was attributed to cerebral congestion (effusion of blood in or upon the brain), due to sudden immersion at such a time. This case suggests to Medical Classics some causes of accidents which are apt to be overlooked, and it therefore considers briefly why the practice of bathing after meals or when fatigued is justly condemned.

A natural result of cold immersion at this stage is to encourage or induce a tendency to syncope, to concentrate surface blood still more about the central organs, including the heart, which, especially if at all unequal to its duties, labors ineffectually to readjust the blood pressure, and finally succumbs, with lungs and venous system engorged by passive congestion. It is as if an enemy occupied the outworks of a fortress left for a time unguarded, and forthwith paralyzed the resistance of the citadel. It is best, therefore, to wait for at least an hour and a half or two hours after a good meal before bathing. Another danger to be avoided is that of cramp. This is particularly apt to occur after severe exercise or long immersion. The effect of cold being to prolong the contraction, while exhaustion lowers both the power and the elastic recoil of muscle, it is evident that we have in a combination of these forces all that is required for the production of this dangerous condition. The obvious warning implied in these remarks requires no further admonition to impress the fact that the bather in cold water must be economical of time and free from any appreciable signs of muscular exhaustion.

Moral—1. Don't bathe just after a meal. 2. Don't bathe when fatigued. Digest and rest, and then bathe.

An hour before noon and before going to bed are the best times to bathe. The average duration of the bath should be from five to ten minutes for children, fifteen minutes for women, and but little longer for men. To delay much beyond these periods is a pernicious practice, inviting debility and injury. How often one sees, in a stroll along a popular sea beach, groups of drenched, miserable objects, with blue lips, chattering teeth, and wrinkled clammy skin, who have been spending half a morning in alternately plunging into the waves and walking about, dripping, in the cool air. They return from what should have been an invigorating dip in a condition approaching collapse. Such abuse of sea bathing is, unfortunately, too common, even among those who have sought the seaside for the improvement of impaired health.

Small But Annoying Complaints.

Greasy faces indicate poor circulation in the rest of the skin, according to Shirley Dare, who advises for them hot baths, friction of the body, and thorough treatment by a saturated solution of camphor in alcohol, with which the face should be frequently wet, allowing it to dry on.

A good remedy for damp hands is eau de cologne four ounces, tincture of belladonna half an ounce, the hands to be rubbed with the mixture several times a day; while, for the feet, one part of salicylic acid and five parts of powdered starch, sprinkled on the sole of the stocking, is said to be beneficial.

Milk Diet for the Nerves.

Many brain workers and others of highly nervous temperament are troubled with insomnia, nervous twitchings and sensations of falling. A dietetic cure recommended for this trouble is milk, and, if the patient can limit himself to milk alone, one pint at a time, taken four times daily, is the prescribed quantity. The milk used should be up to the standard; if it is not, cream should be added to it. People with weak nerves, as a rule, drink but very little water, whereas they usually require a larger quantity than those whose nerves are strong and not easily shaken.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

At the Table—Some Hints That May Be Useful to the Uninitiated.

The old maxim, "Eat at your own table as you would at the table of a king," can hardly be bettered as a rule for table manners, and it may be added that should one unaccustomed to ceremonious repasts happen to be at the table of any social dignitary, he has in general only to keep calm, observe what others do and quietly conform himself as far as possible to the prevailing manner of host and other guests, in order to appear at least without discredit to himself.

There are, of course, certain rules, familiar to the initiated as household words, that should always be observed and that furnish the solid foundation on which one who is striving to acquire a pleasing and polished manner must build. As every one has not had the advantages of early training, it is well to note these small but all important points. First and foremost among them is, "Never be late to dinner." Then seat yourself properly in an easy and convenient attitude, neither a foot from the table, so that you must bend over and stoop your head to get each mouthful, nor jammed up stiffly against it. Do not refuse to take soup, but never ask for it twice; remember also that it should be taken from the side—not the end—of the spoon, and be sure not to eat it with a hissing or gurgling sound, than which nothing is more obtrusively ill bred. Do not cut your bread with your knife, nor butter the slice and bite into it, but break off small pieces with the fingers.

When one is helped to a plate or dish of anything it is the modern way to keep it, not to pass it along to some one else; and it is also the modern fashion to leave the knife and fork on the plate when sent for a second helping, though in a course dinner it rarely occurs that one asks to be helped twice.

Don't overload the fork and use it as a sort of beast of burden for conveying food to the mouth; raise it laterally with the right hand, never crooking the elbow in awkward fashion so as to bring the hand at a right angle or the fork directly opposite the mouth. In eating vegetables and for most other dishes, a fork, if it can be conveniently used, should have preference over the spoon.

Do not hold your knife and fork upright, after a child's fashion when talking, nor flourish them about to emphasize conversation.

Greater liberty in the use of the fingers in eating is now fashionable. Olives, unhulled berries, wings and legs of small birds, green corn and even asparagus may be eaten with them. Indeed, the manner in which this latter vegetable is taken in the fingers and mouth is something of a test in table manners, and, as a rule, stamps the elegance of the diner. All cutlery is withheld from the service, and there is but one alternative to taking the cold sticks up in your fingers—total abstinence. The only trouble is that people try to eat too much. One bite is all that should be expected from a stick. Then you escape the string that dabbles your chin and confirms your bad form.

Do not fold the napkin after a ceremonious dinner; in other cases, observe what your hostess does and be guided by that.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

A Long and Not Specially Interesting Monthly Session Still More Electric Arcs.

All members of the city council were present at the regular monthly session on Wednesday night, excepting Mr. Johnston. The meeting opened in the usual routine way—reading the minutes, hearing the mayor's report of collecting $5 in fines and $25 in house rent, and the treasurer's gratifying assurance that there was a balance August 7th of $2764.77.

E. Huber and wife presented a deed of land for an alley in the Boulevard addition, and the same was accepted.

The plot of Thomas Thompson' addition of some thirty lots in West Marion, south of the Grand Hotel, was presented and referred to the street and alley committee.

Solicitor Scofield was directed to commence legal proceedings for the opening of south High and east Canal streets, condemnation proceedings being necessary.

The committee on street lighting reported that the members had carefully investigated the matter and found that the newly admitted territory needing street lights would be better served with twenty-five arcs than with five times as many vapor lamps, and recommended increased electric light service, and the sale of the city's vapor lamps. The new ordinance providing for the electric light contract was read the first time, and the council adjourned to meet on the evening of August 19th.

The Mendelssohns at Music Hall.

A musical performance must be of rare merit to win the favor of a Marion audience, and the Mendelssohns showed their excellence Wednesday evening by fairly captivating their hearers. They were encored again and again, and the audience seemed never to tire of the entertainment. To mention the numbers separately would be to repeat words of praise.

Miss Rogall, although seeming not at her best, was pleasing. Her "Love's Old Sweet Song" was a dainty thing, and won for her an encore, to which she responded charmingly.

The entertainment was fairly well patronized.

—Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Wiant have returned home, after a pleasant visit at Urbana.

—Only one week more in which to purchase tickets for the drawing of the sorrel pacer. Fifty tickets are yet unsold, and they should be quickly taken. Call at the English Kitchen.

—Considerable malaria is prevalent in the First and Second wards, but the physicians in charge of the cases do not regard them of so serious a nature as many have reported. It is not malignant.

—Some clever fabricator sent the Columbus Dispatch a special report of an alleged prize fight between John Hane and Charles Holstegn. This "blood-curdling" knock-out was no more than a little friendly bout between the boys with gloves.

—Henry Reiser is now at work completing a telephone line from the city to the reservoir of the Marion Waterworks company west of town. It will be necessary to put up about three miles of line, of which about half the distance is completed.

—It seems that Frank Bull quietly bucked his Prospect and Marion friends and married Miss Millie Brownmiller, of Prospect, on Saturday evening, July 6. The fact only became public last Saturday, since which time congratulations have been pouring in.

—Messrs. Fies, Harraman, Kling and Payne represented the Marion Gun club in a match shoot at Kenton, Wednesday. The boys have very little to say as to what success they achieved, but it is currently believed that they held their own much better than on the last trip.

—Capt. J. G. Mann, and wife and two children, of Jackson, Tenn., are guests of the Captain's brother, Judge Norris and family. Captain Mann is general superintendent of the southern lines of the Illinois Central Ry, and has made his journey north very pleasantly in his own private car.

—There is no citizen who fully comprehends the extent of the new Huber shops, now in process of erection, until he has visited the grounds. Neither the west or south fronts give any idea of their extent. Upper Sandusky, who is just now marvelously tickled over the prospects of getting a little thresher works, should come down and see what a real live institution of that kind is.

Notice of Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between Sallie A. Fenton and Julia F. Garwood under the firm name and style of Fenton & Garwood has this day been dissolved by mutual consent.

Mrs. Julia F. Garwood will hereafter own and conduct the business of the firm, under the name of Fenton & Garwood.

A NEW WEST MARION.

Dr. W. C. Brinkerhoff Has a Scheme on Foot for Building up a Fine Suburb—Will Prospect For Gas.

Dr. W. C. Brinkerhoff, the well known specialist who hails from Upper Sandusky, has entered into a bold scheme to build up a new West Marion, a scheme that is dashing and full of nerve, with many plausible and commendable features to it.

Dr. Brinkerhoff was the purchaser of the Harry Lee farm of 61 acres, lying west of the city at the terminus of the C. and A. yards, on the north side. This land he has platted into "West Marion," a suburb of 200 lots, with the necessary streets and alleys.

His plan is one of subscription. The lots sell from $200 to $300, and not less than 50 nor more than 125 of these must be conditionally subscribed for before the plans shall begin to mature. There are three conditions which must be complied with on the part of Dr. Brinkerhoff to make the subscription binding. For one he must build a street railway reaching from the center of the city of Marion to the new West Marion. For another condition, and an important one, he must drill two wells for gas, and there is a strong belief that that great commodity will be discovered. These wells are to be drilled at the Doctor's expense, on his lots. If gas is found a gas company with $10,000 stock shall be formed of West Marion lot owners, and among said owners the Doctor is to divide one half the $10,000 stock free of charge. If gas is not found the lot owners are out not one cent of expense.

The third condition is that Dr. Brinkerhoff shall execute a $10,000 bond for the faithful performance of his agreements as to the street railway and natural gas.

This is a novel plan, indeed. It is bold and interesting, and promises certain to awaken general interest. The belief that natural gas can be found in that section, and the promise to drill two wells in search thereof, intensifies the interest, and the Doctor will receive many good wishes for success.

The doctor is stopping at Hotel Marion this week.

Farmers' Festival.

The third annual harvest home of the Delaware, Morrow and Marion county association will be held in Shoemaker's grove, Ashley, Ohio, on Saturday, August 10th, 1889. Gen. Wm. H. Gibson, of Tiffin, Ohio, has been engaged to deliver the address for the occasion. The Ashley Times says a cordial invitation is extended to all to come and make the day one long to be remembered.

Progress.

It is very important in this age of vast material progress that a remedy be pleasing to the taste and to the eye, easily taken, acceptable to the stomach and healthy in its nature and effects. Possessing these qualities, Syrup of Figs is the one perfect laxative and most gentle diuretic known.

A Natural Medicine, an Agreeable, Not a Nauseous Dose.

"Throw physic to the dogs."
—Shakespeare or Bacon?

INVIGORATING and appetizing if taken cold before eating in the morning. It tones up the system, settles a disordered stomach. A gentle, but sure cathartic. If a matitudinal cocktail must be indulged in, it will counteract its bad effects as to stomach and brain. An absolute and sure preventitive of sea sickness. Its components are closely allied to the gastric juices of the stomach.

An Antidote to Intoxicants.

IF taken regularly, fresh and cold, three times a day, before each meal, it will put the stomach in such a shape that the necessity for stimulants will not be felt, and excessive desire can be toned down to simple moderation. I shall keep Clam Juice constantly on hand to be served FREE, hot or cold, to my customers. Knowing positively from experience that it will do all that is claimed for it above, I will try in every way to promote its use, as it is not my wish to encourage excessive drinking, and if I can discourage it by giving away freely the only known antidote I will only be too glad to do so.

Have also for sale Buckingham whisky, old Maryland rye—fully matured, seven years old, the best in the country.
